Our mission is to guide families in housing crisis from insecurity to stability, self-reliance, and prosperity.

2026 High-Priority Needs: The "Why"

Clothing

Colorado winters can be harsh. When families have warm coats and boots, parents have peace of mind knowing their children can play safely at recess and walk to school without worry. One less barrier between families and the stability they're building.

Hygiene Products

1 in 3 low-income individuals have missed work, school, or similar events due to lack of access to period supplies. When families must choose between menstrual products and groceries, dignity shouldn't be the cost. Your donations ensure women can move through their days with confidence.

Basic hygiene affects everything from job security to school attendance. Without soap, shampoo, toothpaste, and deodorant, families face social stigma, health risks, and barriers to employment and education.

Food

Donating food helps families stay nourished, focused, and resilient during times of uncertainty. These essential items provide reliable meals, fuel busy days for children and parents alike, stretch tight grocery budgets, and bring comfort and stability to the table. This makes it easier for families to focus on learning, work, and building a stronger future together.

Cleaning Supplies

Household Cleaning Supplies are often the first cut from stretched budgets. Without proper cleaning products, families face increased risks of illness and health issues. These essentials help families maintain the healthy environments they need as they work toward stability. Help families maintain organized, healthy homes where homework gets done, meals get made, and routines support the stability families are building.

Baby Essentials

Diapers, wipes, and formula are non-negotiable expenses that can strain already tight budgets, with diapers and wipes alone costing $100 per month per baby. With 88% of families led by single parents in our transitional housing program, your donations help households meet their little ones' needs while working toward long-term financial goals and housing stability.
